McGraw and Holt.

It is whispered about, and there are evidences that the truth has been approached, that Col. John T. McGraw and Judge Holt, the Democratic nominee for governor, are not in accord; that Holt is not putting much life into the campaign, except so far as legislative nominations are concerned. This all comes about through Holt's senatorial aspirations. If the legislature should be Democratic he will be a candidate against McGraw. This, naturally, does not please the Taylor county boss. There is no question but what Col. McGraw is the undisputed leader of the party, and that he will again try to break into the United States senate. A large part of the delegates nominated have declared in his favor, and he thinks that Holt is invading his particular preserves in aspiring to represent the state in the upper house of Congress.

We do not think, however, that Judge Holt will have much show as against Col. McGraw. If the Democrats have a majority in the next legislature. Nevertheless, Col. McGraw is quite foxy. While he is corralling all the delegates he can lay his hands on, he is speaking words of hope in the ears of ex-Senators Camden and Davis, and encouraging them to believe that there is some chance for them. This is merely pastime for McGraw, for in working Camden and Davis up to a stage of hope he may possibly get them to tap their barrels, and aid him in the election of delegates he has pre-empted to satisfy his own ambition. We do not know how far he has aroused the political vanity of Davis and Camden, but we believe they are quite receptive, and there is no man in the state who can be so smooth and plausible in matters political, when he tries, than Col. John T. McGraw. Judge Holt may have caught onto his tricks, but we do not think the knowledge will do the Democratic candidate for governor any good.

In the meantime, all is not so lovely in the Democratic camp as surface conditions would indicate.

Alaskan Boundary.

These Democratic papers which attacked the administration for the extension of the modus vivendi to regard to the boundary of Alaska evidently have not familiarized themselves with the matters in dispute, or else they have recklessly jumped at conclusions. The Journal of Commerce, after declaring that it believes American diplomacy has rarely achieved a greater success than in establishing the modus vivendi with Great Britain last year, maintains that it was practically a complete recognition by Great Britain of our claims, but described as a temporary arrangement in order to avoid wounding the feelings of Canada, the temporary character, however, being expressed in terms which bear the appearance of being designed by the United States and Great Britain to be permanent.

"In referring to the complaints of miners," says the Journal, "we have already pointed out the distinction between jurisdiction and ownership. When Great Britain or the United States is spoken of as the owners of the district jurisdiction is meant, and the ownership of claims by individuals is not affected by jurisdiction or sovereignty. The modus vivendi contains this language: 'It is understood, as formerly set forth in communications of the department of state of the United States, that the citizens or subjects of either power found by this arrangement within the jurisdiction of the other, shall suffer no diminution of the rights and privileges which they now enjoy.' The Journal then goes on to specify the nature of the boundary affected by agreement with Great Britain. It says:

The Canadians desire the British flag over the mining regions just as our miners desire the American flag, because every man prefers the flag of his own country. But the real effort of Canada has been not to acquire the mining district, but to acquire a part of the sea coast. Our boundary, defined in the treaty of 1825, between England and Russia, is a range of mountain peaks, or ten leagues from the windings of the shore, where the mountain peaks are more distant. Exploration has proved that a mountain range substantially parallel with the coast does not exist. Our claim, therefore, is the ten marine leagues. Canada set up the claim that the ten leagues should be measured from the outer shore line of the islands that fringe the coast. This would have thrown the United States off the main line entirely for a great part of the distance. The Canadians then picked out certain mountain summits which they said should constitute the line, but they do not form a mountain range. They claimed, also, that the coast line should be taken from headland to headland, so that ten marine leagues from the mouth of the Lynn canal would leave the upper part of that inlet on the Canadian side, and give it the coveted seaport on the Pacific.

The temporary boundary is nearly on the line claimed by the United States, but its position is fixed by certain mountain summits in deference to a part of the Canadian claim. It is more than twenty miles in a straight line from Pyramid Harbor, which the Canadians have strained every nerve to establish their claim to; it is several miles above any navigable water in the Chilkat Inlet of Lynn canal. Nothing that the Canadians attached importance to is retained by Great Britain.

Ali Fuss and Feathers.

Last evening Col. William Jennings Bryan and party left Lincoln, Neb., on their spectacular tour across the country to Indianapolis, where the colonel and his running mate will be notified of their nomination at Kansas City. The pomp and circumstance, and the theatrical claptrap attending the occasion is in marked contrast to the democratic simplicity and dignity that characterized the notification of the Republican nominees at their homes. Such simplicity would not satisfy the dictator of Lincoln, who lives in the sound and fury of his own voice and whose vanity is tickled by the adulation of those over whose minds he holds a peculiar sway.

The object of turning the notification of Colonel Bryan into a spectacle is quite plain. The colonel has prepared himself fully, so that he will leave the best impression possible upon the crowds that are expected at the metropolis of Indiana, to-morrow. He is a letter perfect in his speech, having committed it to memory, so that he can employ all the arts of oratory and bring all the tricks of rhetoric into play. The idea of the Democratic managers in the suggestion of Col. Bryan, of course, in selecting Indianapolis for this theatrical episode, is to make an early impression upon the people of the middle western states, especially Indiana and Illinois, which they affect to believe are doubtful. It may be that for the time being the hearers of Col. Bryan will be charmed by his eloquence, but there will come the sober second thought that moves the judgment of men at the critical moment. When that hour arrives, Col. Bryan's sophistry will have been forgotten, and reason will rule instead of rhapsody.

The allies on Sunday encountered a large force of Chinese a short distance from Tien Tsin, routing them, but meeting with severe loss. The dispatches are rather indefinite, and do not mention any loss to United States troops, merely stating that the Russians and Japanese suffered severely.

That bright contemporary of the Intelligencer, the Washington, Pa. Reporter, celebrated the twenty-fourth anniversary of its daily issue last Saturday, with a handsome double number, and showed other evidences of its prosperity.

Bryan's notification speech will consume one hour and twenty minutes in its delivery. The weather is most too warm to contemplate a speech of that length.

Chicago authorities are right in taking the most drastic measures for suppressing the anarchists. They remember the bomb-throwers of the Haymarket riot.

They are even lying about it. It appears that the Chinese diplomat did not commit suicide. He is only disappointed.

Bryan would better get all the fun he can out of the notification meeting at Indianapolis to-morrow, for the people will hold another notification meeting in November, when they will notify him to stay at home.

The Second district Democrats will hold their congressional convention at Martinsburg to-morrow. Ex-Speaker McKinney refuses to be offered up as a sacrifice, and while Stuart W. Walker, of Martinsburg, seems to be the second choice that gentleman is also shy about accepting the nomination, and insists that Col. McGraw is the man for the occasion. Well, give us the "Knight of the Purple Pencil." We think his case can be attended to.

About the funniest thing that has emanated from the German press comes from the National Zeitung, of Berlin, which affects to account for our "wavering policy" towards China because of the Chinese vote of the United States. That is certainly as amusing as the "paramount issues" of the Democracy.

There is no going behind the returns of Pittsburgh's evidences of prosperity. The census gives her a population of 322,322—an increase of $3,705 over 1899.

Following the Scriptures.

San Francisco Bulletin: "I don't know what to make of that boy of mine," said the fond father, who is always talking about his son, getting his friend in a corner where he couldn't escape. "When I went home last night my wife told me that he had been fighting with one of the neighbors' boys and needed a talking to, so I summoned him and said sternly:

"What have you been doing, my son?"

"Fighting," he answered, shortly, looking me straight in the eye.

"So I see," said I, looking him over. "He's bigger than I!" he flashed, with a ring in his voice.

"Who?"

"Jimmy Jones."

"So you have been fighting with Jimmy Jones?"

"Yes," he said.

"Son," said I, sternly, "have you forgotten what I said about fighting?"

"He hit me on the cheek," shouted my boy, with kindling eyes.

"O, son, son," said I, don't you know what the Bible says about turning the other cheek?"

"I remembered it, pop—honest, I did—and turned the other cheek, but instead of hitting me there he smashed me on the nose! Say, wasn't that a foul?"

"It looks like it, son," said I, trying hard not to laugh.

"That's what I thought," he exclaimed as quick as a wink, "so I sailed in and licked the stuff out of him! 'Tain't no use, pop," interposed the boy quickly, "forgetting my remarks, they been to Sunday school just as much as I have and knows the proper thing to do as well as I do!"

"Now, what could I say to that?" exclaimed the fond father, beaming with satisfaction.

Had Made His Wife a Promise and Kept It Like a Man.

A man entered a well known Broadway cafe late the other night and walked up to the bar rather unsteadily.

"Gimme a beer an' seltzer," he said.

The attendant looked at him with surprise, and the other persons present in the place opened their eyes.

"Do you want 'em separated or mixed?" asked the bartender.

"Mixed, of course," said the man.

"Draw a glass of beer an' put some seltzer in it."

The attendant did as requested, while the others regarded the man curiously. Noticing this, he said:

"Well, I s'pose you're surprised at my new drink. It's just this way. When I went out to-night my wife said: 'Now, John, be good, and drink seltzer.' 'All right, my dear,' I replied and I've drunk seltzer all night. I had champagne and seltzer at dinner, brandy and seltzer after dinner, several whiskeys and seltzer through the evening, and now I'm winding up with beer an' seltzer. I've kept my word like a man," and smiling his cheek proudly he sailed forth.

QUEER CAMPAIGN.

Being Carried on in South Carolina. G. Walton Whitman a Peculiar Character—Captain Jennings' "40" Children.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 6.—For four consecutive campaigns G. Walton Whitman has been a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in this state. Until ten years ago Whitman was a preacher, but since then he has been studying politics. He is now making the contest under circumstances that are peculiarly distressing to others in the campaign. Four years ago Whitman received about 2,000 votes at the caucuses in a total of 50,000. Two years later his vote was 240. This year it will be even less, and yet Mr. Whitman is as absolutely confident of election as a man can well be. Some time ago he called at the state house, visited some of the officers and announced in the most serious manner that, expecting soon to be associated with the officers as their chief, he desired to become better acquainted with them.

It was some time after the opening of the campaign before Mr. Whitman could pay the entrance fee exacted by the state executive committee and he is now accompanying the party under circumstances painful to the other members, who know that he often speaks when the pangs of hunger are severe, and when he has not rested for some time in a bed. Recently Whitman arrived at a station from which the other candidates took carriages to the place of speaking, twelve miles distant. He could not go in a carriage, and with only a glass of milk for breakfast he rode an old bicycle that distance over a sandy road, made his speech and humped back. He would not accept the hospitality of others and was only persuaded to break his fast that evening on a watermelon. He often sleeps in chairs.

Mr. Whitman is perhaps the best read man and by far the most versatile speaker in the campaign. He is 51 years old and has a family of grown children. His chief aim is to tear down colleges and build up public schools.

There are other features of the campaign that are not so painful. Capt. J. A. Jennings, candidate for treasurer, stated in a speech that he had no record no other candidate could touch and it was his chief recommendation—he had lived with the same wife for forty years and they had forty children. The crowd cheered and told Jennings he would get their votes. Dr. Timmerman, the incumbent, stated that he had known a Georgian who had four wives and forty-two children. Mr. Jennings later said that the "40" was a slip of the tongue, he meant "14" children.

One candidate for lieutenant governor declared that if elected he would not hire "niggers" at $2 a day to wash out spittoons in the senate when worthy white men would be glad of the job; his competitor got the crowd by retorting that he would not let a white man do such work for him.

There are thirty candidates who speak every day, and despite the time limits, against which all protest, the meetings last seven hours. Whiskey is discussed about six hours a day.

Deafness Can not be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, etc. Hall's Family Pills are the best.
